Credit unions in California and Pennsylvania recently appointed new CEOs, while Arizona's third largest credit union announced its CEO's retirement, launching a search of a new leader.

The board of directors for the $275 million Cabrillo Credit Union in San Diego said Wednesday it appointed Anne McClure as the new president/CEO.

She replaced Dean Odle.

McClure was named interim CEO in May 2018 after working as the credit union's chief operations officer. She also served Cabrillo's senior vice president of Human Resources and Compliance.

McClure launched her career with Cabrillo in 1992 as vice president of marketing and has worked in the banking industry since 1989.

"The board is very eager to see where Anne leads Cabrillo," said Board Chair Bruce May. "Her experience as a dedicated credit union executive of more than 25 years has prepared her well for this new leadership role, and we feel Anne will continue to grow and strengthen Cabrillo for many years."
